SCHEME FIT	Would be best in a zone based nickel role where he can be matched up against a slot receiver so he can line up in press, but not jam, to highlight his footwork, utilize short area quickness and blitzing ability.
PROJECTION	Backup CB you can win with. Struggles with anything deep despite solid foot speed, in-breaking due to a combination of size and mental processing, and routes that makes him sift through traffic as he lacks ideal competitive toughness and aggressiveness. Would be best in a zone based nickel role where he can be lined up against a slot receiver so he can be matched up in press, but not jam, to highlight his footwork, utilize short area quickness and blitzing ability.
BACKGROUND	A 5th year DC who has started 88% of his games played, including 11 of his 15 games in 2019. He has dealt with a number of significant injuries throughout his career and changed teams in 2019 being released from the Buccaneers where he was in his first season under Defensive Coordinator Todd Bowles attacking 3-4 system. He started as a Boundary Corner and was released after nine games. He was picked up off waivers by the Texans where he played in Romeo Crennel's 3-4 scheme where he played mainly in the Slot Corner role.
BODY TYPE / AA	Small, muscular frame with a firm chest and midsection, good quads for his size, adequate height, adequate arm length, and small 8.75" hands. Good AA with good quickness, COD, agility and solid balance, explosiveness, and foot speed.
POSITIVES IN PASS GAME
Has good AA with good short area quickness and agility to mirror WRs off the snap in short to intermediate routes from a close press alignment. Solid balance in transitioning and a very smooth, natural backpedal. Is best when he can just mirror or funnel in short to intermediate routes and not think. Best on outbreaking routes where his COD and agility can really shine. Solid ability to disrupt catch and uses the sideline as an additional defender by pushing WRs in mid-air out of bounds which can make up for his lack of height and length when targeted near the boundary. Solid mental toughness and ability to bounceback the next play if beaten (for example: Week 1 vs. SF: Gives up big 3rd & long completion on a slant route with the 49ers pinned near their end zone as he was not set and didn't seem to be aware of the sticks. Next play he jumped a comeback route for a pick 6).
POSITIVES IN RUN GAME
Solid in run support and does leverage the ball well and has shown the ability to take on perimeter blocks when the play is going his way and tackle the ball carrier. Takes solid angles and plays with some urgency going outside in vs. ballcarriers in the open field. When asked to blitz, he is solid with good timing and speed and solid at avoiding and shedding blockers. Best against smaller receivers where he isn't physically overmatched.
NEGATIVES IN PASS GAME
Adequate LOS skills, small frame, short arms, adequate aggressiveness, physical toughness and poor play strength show up in Press where he rarely jams a receiver, instead lining up and using his solid footwork to mirror in close proximity. Has adequate man coverage skills on crossing routes or anything in-breaking where he can be exposed by his lack of size and hesitation to pull the trigger when he breaks. At the break point his lack of size shows up most both during subtle push-offs from receivers and at the catch point where he is frequently overmatched by both bigger and more physical receivers. Too small to guard TE man-to-man as even when he's in position, he gives up catches. Struggles sticking with Receivers on deep balls due to lack of height and length despite solid foot speed. Fares better in Zone, especially Cover 2 where he has his eyes looking into the QB or able to pass off Receivers. In more complex schemes or in position where length is at a premium (Cover 3 – bail), he struggles as despite having explosive marks at the Combine, he is rarely in a position to jump off two feet to accentuate his vertical. Struggles in off coverage as is adequate mental processing shows up as he's very hesitant and doesn't seem to trust his studying. That combined with his lack of size have him behind the eight ball from off coverage where he struggles to close the gap effectively. Only adequate range as a result of that size and getting caught thinking too often. Could potentially be attributed to learning a new scheme mid-year, but has been a consistent problem in Tampa throughout his career. Often struggles to recognize basic concepts like mesh that take advantage of his size in man coverage. He doesn't have the size, aggressiveness, and only adequate competitive toughness to fight through traffic. In both man and zone, he will struggle on anything in-breaking due to size and adequate FBI. Has adequate ball skills when the ball is in the air as evident by his two career interceptions. Adequate ball tracking and locating the ball with his back to the QB and is grabby which again goes back to not trusting himself. Adequate consistency and his performance varies greatly from game to game.
NEGATIVES IN RUN GAME
When the ball is in the open field, he is only an adequate tackler on plays that he's on the inside going out. His effort very clearly wanes on these plays and he was previously benched for loafing in this situation in Tampa Bay.
