SUMMARY

7th year pro who has started 70 of 102 total games and 5 of 14 in 2017 and has also played for Dallas and Washington. In 2017 for the Cowboys he played under OC Scott Linehan in a Inside/Outside Zone and Gap scheme where he started 5 games for the injured Ezekiel Elliott. Was used as only a 1st and 2nd down back and replaced with Rod Ford and Darren McFadden in passing situations. Solid height and weight with a thick lower body build, shows adequate athletic ability with adequate COD, lateral ability, balance, explosiveness, long speed, and acceleration. Shows good mental processing pre snap to recognize defensive fronts and blitzes, post snap has very good mental processing and vision to see open holes on inside/outside zone and gap run plays. On outside gap runs and inside/outside Zone plays he shows very good patience when setting up blocks to create extra yardage. On Zone plays shows very good decision making to find the open hole as they develop on the front side of the play. Shows solid ability to create separation on short swing routes and has patience to let blocks develop on screen passes. Solid pass blocking ability as he scans the formation inside out to find the appropriate defender to block. Also has a willingness to block and stay low to engage with edge rushers and blitzing linebackers with good strength and toughness. Post snap, even though he sees the proper hole he lacks the lateral quickness and COD to jump cut and create runs on the backside of the formation. Shows adequate burst due to his lack of acceleration and lateral quickness. Adequate inside gap runner due to adequate burst and acceleration and lack of overall athletic ability, is a one speed runner. Shows adequate ability to finish runs and create yards after contact, lacks balance through contact against all first and second level defenders, lacks the athletic ability to evade defenders, and the play strength to power through defenders to gain extra yardage. If the OL does not block the yardage, Morris will not pick up the yardage. Has inconsistent hands and ball adjustment traits as he is always taken off the field in obvious pass situations and was not thrown to often when on the field. Marginal intermediate and deep route runner, lacks acceleration, COD, and lateral quickness to create separation against second and third level defenders. In pass pro can be overpowered and driven back into the QB by stronger interior defensive lineman. Morris is a rotational back that can be used effectively on outside gap run plays with pulling offensive lineman, plays where he can set up blockers in space, and zone run plays. He will best fit in a zone system where he can leverage his vision, mental and processing.
