BEST	Drive on Gap Blocks, Anchor vs. Bull Rush, Agressiveness in key situations
WORST	Ability to Mirror, Waist Bender, Blocking LB in space
PROJECTION	A solid starting OG you can win with in a Gap Blocking scheme with his ability to drive defenders off the LOS. Is better suited for a quick passing scheme where he doesn't have to hold Pass Block as long. Will lunge from waist and miss blocks in space.
SCHEME FIT	A Gap Block oriented scheme with quick pass that gets the ball out of the hand of the QB quickly.

SUMMARY

10th year OT who has started 85 of 104 games with a knee injury in 2017 causing him to go on IR in Week 16. Started at RT in first 15 games of season while logging time at LT early in the season while in a rotation with Ogbuehi and Fisher. Has spent 9 out of his 10 years in Cincinnati; with 2017 being his first year back after a year in Minnesota; with Bill Lazor serving as the Offensive Coordinator when he took over for Ken Zampese after Week 2. Good height and weight, with a big, stock build and very long arms. Displays solid athletic ability and movement skill with good agility for a guy of his size. Very good Gap blocker with his ability to fit and finish blocks at the LOS in the run game. Is a road grader on Base blocks, getting into the DL quickly with hands inside, gets good push and finishes blocks through the whistle, showing the ability to control/steer all body types of DL including those lined up as 3 or 5 techniques. Solid at executing Combo blocks with good ability to work, fit, and finish blocks well with RG. Displays good ability to get around the line quickly on Pulls, see the defender, fit, and finish blocks. Shows even more aggressiveness to get block in key situations especially on Goalline runs. Good ability to Anchor vs. the Bull Rush when able to use his good quickness of the snap and quick feet in vertical set to beat the defender to the spot. Adequate space blocker due to taking bad angles in space causing him to lunge at defenders while bending at the waist in the open field. Struggles to get around and get good fit on Reach block on defenders lined up in either the 3 or 7 techniques. Marginal in pass protection showing inability to get good fit vs. speed rushers in vertical or jump Sets and struggles to mirror and hold blocks for very long due to slow feet and hands when engaged at the POA due in part to marginal UOH, placing hands outside of the defenders pads and being too early on his punches. Hands rushers can knock his hands away very easily when rushing the passer causing him to lose his balance due to bending at the waist. Adequate mental processing when in Pass Set to read, diagnose, and react to stunts and blitzes from the defense. Overall, he is a solid starting OG you can win with in a run heavy, Gap scheme offense that will utilize his ability to create power and drive defenders off the spot in the run game. Is better suited to a quick passing game due to his struggles to mirror and maintain blocks for long periods of time in space while in pass protection. Thus, is better suited for a move inside to OG where he can work in a phone booth.
