Tapes Viewed
2018: at WAS 09/16, at PHI 09/23, vs HOU 09/30, vs JAX 11/11, vs TEN 11/18

BEST
Physical Toughness/Tackling, Strip Ball, Competitiveness vs Run, Read/React in Man vs TE, Acceleration/Quickness in Zone Coverage

WORST
Read/React in Man vs WR, Transition Quickness/Technique, Range to Sideline/Behind him, Match WR's Footwork/Angles in Press, Disengaging from Run Blocking TE who grab a hold of him, COD

PROJECTION
Starting SS/Box Safety you can win with when able to stay healthy, fits in any heavy Zone scheme preferably with Trap/Fire Zone concepts and a mix of Man with ability to work in all zones and Man vs TE/RB responsibilities. Makes hard hit tackles all over the field/angle and matches deep vertical and short underneath routes. Lacks the Man coverage skills to mirror better athlete WRs.

SCHEME FIT
SS/Box Safety in any heavy Zone scheme preferably with Trap/Fire Zone concepts and a mix of Man with capability in all zones and Man vs TE/RB responsibilities.

SUMMARY

4th year Safety who's started in 26 of 43 career games including 14 of 14 games in 2018, missing Wks. 6-7 with a concussion and Wks. 16-17 with a knee injury. During his injury-plagued career and played with injuries every season, during 2018 was listed with 2 knee injuries, an elbow injury, a concussion, and a neck injury. 1st year under both HC Frank Reich and DC Matt Eberflus in their 4-3 defense, centering around Tampa Cover 2 with some Fire Zone/Trap concepts and Cover 2 Man, they also roll the FS or SS down to blitz, load the box, or help disguise the coverage with a mix of Cover 3/6 and Cover 1. Mainly seen as the Boundary Safety, dropped into the box in Dime personnel and run situations, worked in all underneath/deep zones from mostly Off coverage. Very good height and weight with thick body frame, good arm length, and solid hand size. Solid AA with a combination of good quickness, balance, acceleration, explosiveness, solid agility, and adequate COD. Shows good pre-snap awareness to communicate what he reads. Solid Press vs most sized TE both off and on the LOS with good quickness and solid agility to match footwork/angles and engages with solid timing, hand placement/strength and good explosive jam to force off stem of route. Good Zone coverage with solid mental processing from deep safety and box alignments with solid awareness and angles/leverage on routes entering his zone with good read/react of the QB's eyes/release. Solid Off-Man vs most sized TE/RB in natural position or out wide with good eye discipline, solid route anticipation/patience, and angles also has good acceleration/body control to mirror/match from both Press/Off vs vertical and short underneath routes. Solid downhill range to overlap most routes that he is squared-up to/in front of his body from both the deep and underneath zones using an explosive plant-and-drive and mental processing. Solid ball skills in Man/Zone being more likely to get a PBU than an INT, can read both the receiver's and QB's movements with solid judgement to knock ball away or makes a big hit as the ball arrives with very good physical toughness/hit power and good ball strip/aggressiveness when given the opportunity. Shows good mental toughness making tempo changing plays in crucial situations by making a big hit, PBU, or force fumble. Good run support from deep safety and box alignments with good competitive toughness and key/diagnose of run to leverage gap correctly and can work high-to-low to fill the alley with good downhill acceleration, never shies away from contact engaging with good upper body strength/arm length, and solid UOH to keep separation and work around blocker with good quick/explosive movements. Good tackling form/pad level with very good physical toughness, able to wrap-up/take-down most sized ball carriers, also shows solid open field tackling using solid angles and good body control to leverage ball carrier. Shows good timing of the snap as a blitzer with quickness/explosiveness off the LOS and solid play strength engaging with blockers. Adequate Press vs most sized WR, struggling to match their quicker footwork out of the breaks. Adequate Off-Man and read/react vs most sized WR and quicker/unique TE/RB types, gets crossed up trying to read footwork/anticipate the direction of the receiver's cut with adequate COD. Shows adequate transition quickness due to erect body, narrow feet, rounded breaks, and COD, affecting his range turning towards the sideline and behind him. Adequate disengage vs run blocking TE once grabbing a hold of him struggling to regain separation due to adequate pad leverage, leg drive, and relying more on short-area quickness to get around blocks. Struggles to grab a hold of/wrap-up the more elusive RB when going high-to-low due to COD/hip fluidity. In the NFL, is a Starting SS/Box Safety you can win with when able to stay healthy, fits in any heavy Zone scheme preferably with Trap/Fire Zone concepts and a mix of Man with ability to work in all zones and Man vs TE/RB responsibilities. Makes hard hit tackles all over the field/angle and matches deep vertical and short underneath routes. Lacks the Man coverage skills to mirror better athlete WRs.
