BEST Zone Blocking, Competitive Toughness, Contested Catches, Wide Base

WORST Play Speed, Play Strength, AA, Separation Quickness, Gap Blocking, Pass Pro, YAC, Hands/Adjust

PROJECTION A backup TE that you can win in spite of best leveraged in a run heavy Zone scheme, with a West Coast based passing game that limits the receiving responsibilities of the TE to goal-line/jump ball situations where he can use his frame to box out and make contested catches. Marginal combination of hands/adjust, separation quickness and AA limit his ability as a receiver in other areas of the field, and marginal play strength limits his ability as a Gap blocker

SCHEME FIT Run heavy offense featuring a Zone rushing scheme, and a West Coast passing attack.

SUMMARY

5th-year TE who has started 31 of 60 career games including 7 of 17 in 2017. No significant injuries in 2017. Has played entire career in HC Andy Reid's offense that features heavy West Coast influence and a blended rushing scheme. Aligns at Y, H, and occasionally splits to Slot/X/Z. Very good height with marginal weight, very good arm length, and a thick lower body with a slimmer upper body. Marginal overall AA due to a marginal combination of foot speed, agility, quickness, and explosiveness. Good ability to release versus Press-jam from all DBs and smaller LBs due to good UOH to free himself from contact at LOS. Flashed ability to plant opposite foot and drive while giving a nice head fake on intermediate full-speed routes (i.e. Flags, Posts, etc.). Good ability to adjust to throws that require full extension in front of him while moving. Good ability to use frame to box out all types of defenders and make contested catches. In the running game, he fires out with good pad-level from a three-point stance. Solid overall ability as a Zone blocker primarily due to solid mental processing to display good blocking angles on Reaches/Scoops, Backside Cut-offs, and Space/2nd-level blocks. Shows solid timing in first executing a Combo block before leaving for the 2nd-level. Does a good job of maintaining a wide base after contact is initiated in both Zone/Gap rushing schemes. Good UOH after initial contact to swat away defender's hands and re-position to the inside when inside hand positioning is initially lost. Shows solid play strength versus all DBs to keep his legs moving on contact to sustain and drive them out of the play. Solid competitive toughness displayed when blocking downfield for teammates, and putting in a good effort through the whistle. In Pass Pro, he keeps a nice, wide base and doesn't crossover which allows for good COD versus solid-level speed. Plays with solid pad-level, allowing him to stalemate when fighting for underneath leverage. Marginal release versus Off/Zone, Press-no Jam and Press-jam versus stronger LBs due to a combination of marginal initial quickness/acceleration out of both two and three-point stances and just adequate play strength that allows for disruption. While stemming, he displays marginal play speed due to a combination of poor foot quickness and marginal mental processing causes him to prematurely lean and giveaway routes, and occasionally give blatant push-off moves at the break point and have lapses in reading coverage, failing to properly sit in the void versus Zone. Marginal separation quickness due to marginal AA, COD, and hip flexibility/sink-ability at the break-point of COD routes. Marginal hands and overall adjustment ability, struggling with drop issues due to poor hand dexterity and poor ability to contort his body and catch throws that are below and behind him on the move and while stationary. Marginal in YAC situations due to marginal play speed and athleticism in the open field and marginal play strength, struggling to break tackles, even versus smaller defenders. Marginal initial quickness out of both a two and three-point stance in Zone and Gap rushing schemes, and comes off the ball with marginal pad-level out of a two-point stance. Marginal play speed in both Zone and Gap schemes due to constantly playing with marginal foot quickness and heavy feet. Shows inconsistent initial hand placement in both Gap/Zone blocking, failing to take full advantage of his very good arm-length. When combined with marginal pad-level and poor ability to sustain foot movement versus DL and LBs, it causes him to regularly lose leverage, and a marginal ability to sustain or get movement at the POA as an in-line blocker, which causes a marginal Gap blocking grade. Adequate overall in Pass Pro due to marginal initial quickness from both a two/three-point stance, causing him to be late in getting to set points. Inconsistent hand placement causes him to occasionally lose the inside leverage battle. Marginal mental processing causes late reaction and recognition of late inside moves from good speed. Adequate ability to anchor due to an adequate ability to sink his backside and sink his pad-level beyond a solid grade. Overall, he is a backup TE that you can win in spite of best leveraged in a run heavy Zone scheme, that limits the receiving responsibilities of the TE to goal-line/jump ball situations where he can use his frame to box out and make contested catches. Marginal combination of hands/adjust, separation quickness and AA limit his ability as a receiver in other areas of the field, and marginal play strength limits his ability as a Gap blocker.
