BEST	ZBS Vision, ZBS Cutbacks, ZBS Burst, Finish, Lateral Movement, Active Footwork
------	--

WORST	Pass Blocking, Consistency, Trusting his Blockers
-------	---

PROJECTION	Role player you can with in a zone blocking based system where he can use his vision and 1-cut burst to find space at the 2nd level taking a smaller portion of the snaps. Lacks the durability to start as a feature back for most teams, and the consistency to display his best traits often enough.

SUMMARY

7th year RB who was a starter when healthy, started 65 out of 68 games with some substantial injuries. 1st year in Jon Gruden's ZBS, after 3 seasons in Dirk Koetter's system (mixed ZBS & Gap in Tampa Bay, and previously Mike Sullivan's scheme in Tampa from 2012 through 2014, where he was primarily a starting 2-down RB comfortable in single back and two back sets. Marginal height with solid weight, athletic build with marginal arm length and hand size, displaying good athletic ability with a very good combination of decisiveness, vision, 1-cut burst and finish. Back with flexible alignment depth who displays good mental processing leading to decisiveness after the mesh point to find seams in ZBS reading 1st tier defenders. Shows excellent change of pace in O/S zone as play develops leading to good short area burst when moving to his left (with left plant foot). Possesses very good vision, finding cutback seems in both O/S and I/S zone, but as well in gap schemes to locate backside A Gap running lanes in Power O. Also can stay play side finding good angles with his short area burst to eat up grass quickly. Good athletic ability on display with lateral movement jukes as well jump cuts, he can move laterally and then turn north quickly evading most 1st and 2nd tier defenders within play structure. Displays good pad level in tight running situations leading to very good finish, with his active footwork he is difficult to bring down, can carry defenders larger than his frame. In the passing game, shows good play speed when receiving the ball in traffic (with hands away from body) to secure and brace for impact or get north for additional YAC. He struggles with sticking to play structure in gap scheme, hesitating to hit the hole, or doing too much to manipulate the unblocked Mike and the play fails. This is, at times, is on display in ZBS as well, where he cuts back too early and does not press enough play side not trusting his blockers in front of him and wants to freelance. Does not seem to be the same runner to the right side with 1-cuts off of his right foot, possesses lesser burst to that side. Possesses adequate competitive toughness with consistency in his running game lacking as the 2017 season went on in the wake of his suspension, he was simply not ready to compete for a regular season workload. In his overall adequate passing game, he was used sparingly with a very limited route tree restricted to square ins and flats. Can miss even check down passes that are off the mark, often not working for the best angle to help a QB in duress. Possesses marginal pass blocking ability, was not asked to block much but particularly displays an unwillingness to chip block that has even led to sacks (i.e. CAR game vs. DT Kevin Love) due to the lack of contact. When contact is made, his balance is often derailed leading to unnecessary delay in getting out in routes or in proper control. When one on one with larger sized rushers, relies on a low aiming point that is easy for athletic rushers to evade due to his small frame. Overall, at this stage of his career, he is a role player you can with in a zone blocking based system where he can use his vision and 1-cut burst to find space at the 2nd level taking a smaller portion of the snaps. Lacks the durability to start as a feature back for most teams, and the consistency to display his best traits often enough.
