SUMMARY

6th year offensive linemen who was drafted in the 4th round by Arizona in 2013 and has started 22 of 42 games at LG, RG along with RT. In 2017 he started training camp with the Jacksonville Jaguars, but was released prior to the first game. Arizona signed him before Week 5, and he started weeks 5-14 before sitting out weeks 15 & 16 with an ankle injury. Offensive Coordinator Harold Goodwin used Watford as the RG in his balanced attack. Adequate height, weight with solid arm length and hand size. Stocky build with good bulk having solid AA with solid quickness, agility, and acceleration, adequate balance, and open field COD. Pre-snap he displays his good mental processing while surveying the defense, tapping the OC to let him know when to snap the ball once the calls are made. Good competitive toughness, finishing blocks, looking for work, helping both the OC and OT and rising up to competition in crucial parts of the game. Solid as a Gap blocker using leverage to win the pad level battle and is good with his UOHs, striking from low to high with his hands inside, driving solid competition out, and stalemating with DL with good to elite play strength. In the Trap game when asked to block down, he shows good play strength with solid initial quickness on his first step to wash down good defenders, and when asked to Pull he does a good job with his footwork, opening his hips down the LOS, finding his target and doing a good job with 1st level defenders. Solid overall as a Zone blocker showing his ability execute a Reach block on good defenders with solid play speed, angles, and head placement. Good UOH with good placement, timing, and strength to latch on and control the defender. Solid in Combo blocks coming off of the defensive linemen and getting his hands on the LB often using his body to shield the defender giving the back a running lane. Solid overall in pass protection with good mental processing identifying and picking up twists, good UOH, good timing, and a strong punch, putting on display his ability to use his hands separately like a combination punch or latching on with one hand and bringing the other low to high with elbows in and hands inside the defenders breast plate lifting to control leverage. His best technique in pass pro is his jump set where he can get his hands on the defender early, helping him maintain leverage and use his solid agility to mirror and stay in front good defenders and replace his hands when knocked down, being patient and not lunging on the spin move. When using his 45 degree set he shows good footwork and angles when setting, and good timing using his strong punch on his second step and uses the defenders momentum to wash them down or run them by the quarterback. Solid anchoring ability, replacing the hands and driving his feet into the ground. When he uses leverage early, arches and brings his hips through, he can neutralize the pass rush from very good defenders. As a Zone blocker he doesn't consistently get his head across if he is going against a player who is quicker than him, getting beat to the spot. With his lack of footspeed and 2nd level COD he can't adjust to a good 2nd level defender moving out of his path way & it is tough for him to cut off an athletic linebacker. At times he struggles mentally processing the defense staying on combination blocks too long at the LOS and is late getting on the linebacker. In his 45 degree pass set he isn't consistent with his technique and tends set high without much bend causing him to be susceptible to the Bull rush from players with good play strength, not being able to anchor; also over setting getting beat inside by a Swim move from a player with good AA. Overall he is a solid starter you can win with who can bring depth & positional versatility Best in a Gap blocking scheme where he can block down & Pull to kick out defensive linemen. Struggles in space, and being consistent with his technique in his pass set.
