BEST	Gap Block, Zone/Space Block at POA, Mental Processing
------	---

WORST	Anchor, Play Strength, Mental Toughness
-------	---

PROJECTION	Starting RT that will be effective in a run-heavy offense, both in Gap and Zone schemes. Will struggle in Pass Pro versus EDGE rushers who utilize speed and agility to effect the pocket as he does not have the agility and footwork to match an advanced pass rush plan.
------------	---

SCHEME FIT	Best suited for Gap scheme, though can be effective in Zone scheme at POA in run-heavy system.

SUMMARY

3rd year RT who has started 39 of 39 career games with no significant injuries in 2016. 1st season under HC Adam Gase where he aligned primarily at RT, though has some experience at LT in unbalanced formations. Very good height and weight with elite arm length and displays solid overall athletic ability with a good combination of lateral quickness and explosiveness. Has good pre-snap mental processing, showing the ability to diagnose the defensive alignments and communicate assignments effectively. Has very good Gap blocking abilities as he is able to play with a lower pad level and utilize his explosiveness to drive the defender off the gap at the POA. In Zone blocking schemes, has good display of quickness and hand usage to get to and execute the block at the LOS, and plays with his head on a swivel to be able to locate the appropriate 2nd level defender to engage. Utilizes solid punch and timing in Pass Pro to off-set the pass rush of the DE, and has the awareness and ability to get hands on the 3T to help the RG while still getting hands on the EDGE rusher to run them out of the arc. Has good UOH when engaged with a defender, showing the ability to deflect the hands of the opposing DE to establish leverage. Consistently uses his arm length to his advantage versus speed rush to push the defender outside the arc, often times using the speed of the defender to his advantage. Plays with high pad level and limited flexibility, leaving him susceptible to balance issues while lacking the play strength to offset these traits. Adequate competitive toughness as he doesn't display a consistent mean streak and can easily fall into a poor series of downs after one negative play. Has difficulty getting hands on 2nd level defenders, rarely securing a second level block downfield. In Pass Pro, has a difficult time using hands and feet simultaneously, and often over sets versus speed EDGE rushers which opens up the inside lane to the QB. High pad level, lack of independent use of his arms and feet and lack of physical strength in Pass Pro makes it difficult to reset the defender as he is often driven back into the pocket, making him adequate in Anchor situations. Overall, a starting RT that will be effective in a run-heavy offense, both in Gap and Zone schemes. Will struggle in Pass Pro versus EDGE rushers who utilize speed and agility to affect the pocket as he does not have the agility and footwork to match an advanced pass rush plan.
