BEST AA, Play Speed, Play Strength, Mental Processing, Competitive Toughness, Aggressiveness, Separation Quickness, Hands, YAC, Elusiveness, Concentration/Courage, Run Blocking, Short Area Burst

WORST Foot Speed, Acceleration, Separation on Deep Routes, Play Strength at Top of Stem vs Big DBs

PROJECTION Starting slot receiver you can win because of. He is most valuable in a system that will utilize his very good run blocking and elite separation quickness on short to intermediate routes. Extremely aggressive, very good coverage recognition, and ability to create separation and manipulate DBs' hips with his quickness. He has marginal foot speed and cannot take the top off the defense on deep routes, and struggles against big, physical corners who can engage their hands at the top of his stem.

SCHEME FIT Most valuable in a system that will utilize his very good run blocking and elite separation quickness on short to intermediate routes.

SUMMARY

4th year WR who has started in 57 of 64 games and has yet to miss one. He's in his 2nd year under Head Coach Adam Gase and his unique spread offensive scheme, where he lines up primarily in the slot, but will occasionally line up as an X or Z, and in the backfield as a HB, running mostly short to intermediate routes. Adequate height, solid weight, and a strong, athletic build with short arms, displaying very good athletic ability with a combination of elite quickness, and very good balance, agility, and short area burst. Very good release due to his elite quickness and solid explosion off the LOS. In Press, he has good UOH and consistently chops down DB's hands when they try to Jam him, and he avoids reroutes with his quickness and has a variety of moves off the line to keep the DB guessing. Strong stem, which he keeps consistent so he does not tip his routes, and has elite separation quickness at the top of it. Very good at creating separation due to a combination of his very good mental processing and understanding on where to attack the void vs Zone, ability to manipulate the DB's hips in Man through his quickness, low COG, and COD/short area burst, and the skill to subtly push-off at the top of routes through good UOH and very good play strength. Demonstrates elite hands and ball tracking skills, consistently extending his arms out to pluck the ball, and making difficult catches look easy. When a ball is thrown his way, he runs back to catch it, and he shows the ability to high point and win jump balls, with very good body control and concentration to easily adjust and catch balls around his frame, especially in key 3rd and 4th down situations. Very good play speed and aggressive playing style, always running across the middle full speed, displaying elite concentration by hauling in balls through contact in key situations, shows very good ball tracking skills over his shoulder, and very good body control to get both feet down near the sidelines. Showcases elite YAC due to his elusiveness and play strength, allowing him to break tackles and carry defenders for extra yards. Displays elite competitive toughness through his ability to convert consistently in key situations, very good run blocking, play speed, and aggressive playing style, where he flies across the field looking to make plays whether he has the ball or not. He struggles to take the top off the defense and create separation on deep routes due to adequate foot speed. When big, physical DBs contact him and engage their hands at the top of his stem, he struggles to free himself and create separation on deep/intermediate routes. Overall, he is a starting slot receiver you can win because of. He is most valuable in a system that will utilize his very good run blocking and elite separation quickness on short to intermediate routes. Extremely aggressive, very good coverage recognition, and ability to create separation and manipulate DBs' hips with his quickness. He has marginal foot speed and cannot take the top off the defense on deep routes, and struggles against big, physical corners who can engage their hands at the top of his stem.
