BEST	Acceleration, Explosiveness, Play Speed, Mental Processing, Competitive Toughness, Zone Awareness, Man Coverage vs short and intermediate routes, Range, Short-term memory.
WORST	UOH, Block Shedding, Over-aggressiveness, Poor angles due to lack of discipline, Wrap-up tackle, Blitz
PROJECTION	Solid starter who will play at his best when he can leverage his mental processing, speed and aggressiveness in the open field. He will excel in the passing game in zone and be solid in man coverage. Will struggle to disengage blocks and against deep routes. He is better suited as an ILB in both 4-3 & 3-4 fronts with a system that works to keep him clean from the offensive linemen.
SCHEME FIT	Better suited as an ILB in both 4-3 & 3-4 fronts with a system that works to keep him clean from the offensive linemen.

SUMMARY

2nd year under DC Mike Smith and LB coach Mark Duffner who uses a 4-3/4-2-5 base front relying on Cover 4 and Cover 3 with Pattern-matching rules, where he plays the middle LB role both in run and pass plays. Solid height and weight with adequate hand and arm length, thick frame with big muscles developed and adequate muscular definition. Very good overall AA, very good acceleration, explosiveness and burst, good foot speed, good COD, solid lateral agility, balance and body control. Solid Vs Inside Runs, keys and diagnoses the play quickly and goes downhill with good acceleration filling his gap responsibility. Can take very good FB on lead plays, winning at the POA with good pad level and aggressiveness, clogging the gap and creating a pile. With solid timing and good pad-level he shows good functional strength at the POA to stop good OL and control good FB. Solid Vs Outside Runs, keys and diagnoses quickly, getting to his gap responsibility first and then leveraging his explosiveness and acceleration to move from sideline to sideline with very good range, good angles and burst to meet the RB behind the LOS. Uses his good COD and lateral agility to avoid good OL blocks. Very good in Zone awareness, showing very good discipline to watch the QB and the WR/TE/RB while dropping back with very good AA to backpedal and gain depth, processing the pass concepts in front of him and communicating with his teammates after the snap. He always hits the receiver that goes through his Zone to re-route him and once the receiver makes his cut, he undercuts the route on time to put himself between the ball and the hands of his opponent. Very good against the screen plays, anticipating the play with good mental processing reading his keys properly and using his VG acceleration to get to the runner before the blocks can develop. Solid in Man coverage, capable of covering the Flat, Curl and Hook zones vs good TE and solid RB due to his good explosiveness and acceleration. He can take the seam route away vs solid TE. Converts speed to power delivering big hits with his shoulders taking down solid RB and big WR. As a blitzer disguise it very well, showing good timing and acceleration to attack his gap. Very good competitive toughness, he never stops running, playing at his best throughout the four quarters. Reacting well vs adversity by having short-term memory. Willingness to keep fighting against OL after being beat and controlled, playing with the same amount of violence on the next plays. Shows marginal ability to disengage from blocks in both outside and inside runs, he attacks the opponents by lowering his head and shoulder trying to use power with marginal UOH to create separation and shed the blocks, getting absorbed by blockers (OL/TE) with solid technique. Because of that he will try to go around the blocks, losing time and space. Vs Outside runs he is overaggressive, losing his outside shoulder responsibility, trying to go through the inside shoulder, taking poor angles against solid RB with solid burst and speed. When he is moving laterally, he tends to move to alley pursuit a bit early, so he can't keep a good base to deal with contact. Inconsistent timing to engage the blockers so he gets pushed backwards due to bad body position. His play strength is limited due to his lack of body discipline to maintain a wide base and low hat with consistency. Due to his aggressiveness he is vulnerable to deception plays like counter runs and trap blocks. Will leave his gap responsibility early to make a big play, leaving the cutback lane open. Adequate in Man Coverage vs deep routes due to his adequate stamina on long runs, he will struggle vs RB with good COD to mirror both in and out breaking routes. Adequate tackler, his overaggressiveness causes him to take poor angles and to lose body control and the ability to gather himself and reset his feet, so if a RB with good COD makes a cut he misses. Adequate arm strength and wrap-up technique to finish the tackles effectively. Adequate blitzer due to his inability to go through blocks and finish, let's the OL get his inside first so he gets under control showing a lack of pass rush plan and UOH. Overall, he is a solid starter who will play at his best when he can leverage his mental processing, speed and aggressiveness in the open field. He will excel in the passing game in zone and be solid in man coverage. Will struggle to disengage blocks and against deep routes. He is better suited as an ILB in both 4-3 & 3-4 fronts with a system that works to keep him clean from the offensive linemen.
