TAPES VIEWED 2017: @TEN 9/10, DEN 11/26, NYG 12/3, DAL 12/17, @PHI 12/25

BEST YAC, Competitive Toughness, Vision, Play Strength

WORST Foot Speed, Adjust, Ball Security, Pass Blocking

PROJECTION
Starting 3-down RB due to his Vision and YAC ability, which allow him to find space and then add on that space. Also, a solid pass catcher who can use his YAC ability to pick up extra yards. Struggles with pass blocking and would struggle with holding blocks for a long time and lacks long leg speed to stretch the defense vertically.

SCHEME FIT
He can win in an Inside-Zone scheme which will allow him to use his finish but get downhill where he can pick up YAC. His skills could translate over to Outside-Zone but he wouldn't win consistently because he lacks the foot speed to get to the outside.

SUMMARY

11th year RB who has started 138 out of 145 career games and 15 out 15 games (missed week 8 due to suspension). 1st year with HC Jack Del Rio and 1st year in OC Todd Downing's system where he was primarily a 3 down back who ran Zone. Bernie Parmalee was his RB coach. Solid height, arm length, and hand size with adequate weight, thick body with strong lower half, good athletic ability with a good combination of QABE and COD. Good vision as he leverages the oncoming defender's angle to cut back. Good improvisation in the backfield if a play breaks down. Good decision making, if he cannot find an open lane he engages the defender in front of him with physicality and contact to make back to LOS. Solid burst as he bursts through the hole with strength by lowering his shoulder and using his good play strength to drive through all types of defenders. Rare ability to Finish as he keeps his balance through contact to bounce off of smaller defenders who attempt to tackle him. Generates most of his YAC with his strength by throwing defenders off and running over them, but has the ability to make defenders miss with his agility. Low pad level when entering contact and good competitive toughness as he runs with an aggressive style that allows him to push forward for more yards and falls forward when tackled. Solid mental processing as he knows how much yards he needs to get. Uses his competitive toughness and aggressive run style to rise to the occasion in critical moments. Solid ability in the passing game as he has good hands and a good catch radius, solid ability to adjust to balls thrown behind him and can gather himself well. Very good ability to pick up yards after the catch due to his previously stated finish ability, as he runs over DBs and LBs in space. Can block well when coming out of play action and given a head start with extra momentum on the rusher. Slow acceleration through the hole, and lacks the long leg speed to separate from the defense. Will get caught from behind on longer runs. His weak points at his body are when you get him straightened up and chopping out his legs. Adequate balls security has he run with erratic arm movements in open space that makes him move the ball away from his body at all time. Marginal blocking ability as he struggles to identify who to block when there are multiple rushers free. Lacks the ability to anchor against stronger rushers due to his high pad level and will get pushed back in the quarterback. Inconsistent on his desire to block all depends on size, more willing to block smaller defenders. Struggles to adjust to balls above his head. Overall, a starting 3-down RB due to his Vision and YAC ability, which allow him to find space and then add on that space. Also, a solid pass catcher who can use his YAC ability to pick up extra yards. Struggles with pass blocking and would struggle with holding blocks for a long time and lacks long leg speed to stretch the defense vertically. He can win in an Inside-Zone scheme which will allow him to use his finish but get downhill where he can pick up YAC. His skills could translate over to Outside-Zone but he wouldn't win consistently because he lacks the foot speed to get to the outside.
