SUMMARY

The 5th year pro played his first season in New England in 2017 after spending time with the Dolphins and Bills before. With Josh McDaniels as the offensive coordinator, Gillislee started off the season getting the majority of the carries in a system that used him on Outside/Inside Zone and Gap/Power plays as well as the goal line back but did not get much playing time towards the end of the year due to a talented Patriots backfield. He has solid height and adequate weight with good overall AA possessing good acceleration and long speed with solid COD and adequate lateral agility. Shows good mental processing pre-snap to see potential blitzers and front changes on run and pass plays. Runs with good tempo on Gap plays as he likes to get downhill quick and doesn't hesitate on his cuts, showing good play speed. Shows solid vision and patience on all running plays, able to let his blockers get on their blocks when pulling before cutting off of them while showing the ability to get to the edge on outside plays and the speed to turn the corner. Demonstrates good burst up to 2nd level with good acceleration and runs with good pad level to 2nd level when he gets through the 1st level cleanly. In the open field, he has good long speed and can break long runs if given a crease. He shows solid elusiveness at the LOS, able to use spin move to make DL's and blitzing LB's miss. Good at getting yards after contact as he has good competitive toughness, finishing runs at the 2nd level by using good pad level to pick an edge on the DB or LB and fall forward for extra yards. His speed into contact gives him good play strength as he can break tackles from DB's and LB's when they don't wrap up and does a solid job of pushing the pile making him a good short yardage back. Didn't get many opportunities in the pass game because of James White and Dion Lewis but gets solid separation on routes because of solid COD and good acceleration, and he has good hands. Is good in pass protection, as he shows good mental processing to know who he needs to block and has good competitive toughness, as he is aggressive on blocks. Has hard initial hit on LB's and DB's, able to stop them in their tracks and is very good at chipping DE's and knocking them off course. He runs with adequate tempo on Inside Zone plays as he doesn't press the frontside hole long enough when trying to set up a cutback. On outside run plays, it takes several steps for him to stop and turn up field and cannot make a vertical cut off of a jump cut due to adequate lateral agility. Does an adequate job of taking what the defense gives him. On inside runs plays he will pass up an open hole to try and bounce it to the outside and will lose yards. If he has to change his course to get to the 2nd level he will arrive at the 2nd level with adequate pad level and won't be able to gain yards after contact. In the open field, he weaves instead of making sharp cuts and doesn't show the ability to consistently make DB's miss due to adequate lateral agility. Doesn't show the creativity in the run game to create for himself if a play is not blocked well due to solid lateral agility, and he always carries the ball in his right hand demonstrating adequate ball security. In pass protection, he throws his shoulder into blocks instead of using good hand placement and therefore, doesn't sustain blocks. Overall, he is a 2-down starter you can win with in a Gap/Power system where he doesn't have to make many cuts, has simple reads, and can get downhill quickly. Will be able to gain yards after contact if he can get going vertical and can gain yards in short yardage situations but will not be able to create big plays and yards for himself if there is not good blocking.
