BEST
 Vertical Speed, Concentration over the Shoulder and on Sideline, Open Field Explosiveness

WORST
 Ability to Fight through Jams and Contact in Stem, Overall Physicality and Strength, Length and Hand Size

PROJECTION
 Role player you can win with who can take the top off defenses and create space for teammates with very good play speed and ability to get vertical. Fits better in a complementary role due to a lack of physicality through the route stem and at the catch point in contested situations, as well as an inability to create space for himself in tight quarters. Not someone you want to count on as a full-time starter at this stage of his career due to recent injuries, age and the aforementioned limitations.

SCHEME FIT
 Any system that will utilize him as a complementary receiver and emphasize his ability to threaten the last line of defense and open up opportunities for teammates with his vertical speed, which would be particularly effective in a system that emphasizes taking deep shots off play-action and Hi/Lo concepts.

SUMMARY

10-year WR who has started 110 of 129 games, including 2 of 2 in 2018. Missed Weeks 3-17 and both playoff games due to a broken fibula, playing only 73 snaps all season. First season under play-caller Doug Pederson. Utilized both outside and in the slot. Thin, wiry build with solid height and weight, adequate length and hand size, and good overall AA with very good explosiveness, good short area quickness and lateral agility, and solid balance. Good foot quickness and lateral agility to use jab steps, stutter steps, and hesitation moves. Combined with good acceleration to win inside and outside leverage on releases vs Press. Solid working through jams vs Zone concepts when contact is not carried through the route as it would be in Man. Very good explosiveness to close cushion vs. Off, stresses the leverage of CB's with very good play speed and an ability to maintain speed throughout the stem, forcing them to open their hips. Shows good mental processing to read their leverage and gain separation when working vertically by hitting a second gear to cut across their face at the break point, which is especially effective on deep Posts and vertical routes that require only one cut. Elite play speed combined with an ability to sink his hips and ramp down from top speed makes him dangerous on Comebacks since DB's must respect his ability to beat them deep. Has a second gear off free releases in the intermediate and deep parts of the field to blow by elite CB's. Maintains proper distance from the sideline, giving the QB space to keep the ball inbounds when working deep outside the numbers. Good lateral agility and short area quickness at the break point to decelerate from top vertical speed and break horizontally across the field. Good hands to secure balls within his frame on the move and stationary, over the middle and near the sideline. Solid ability to extend away from frame to secure balls that are high, and also to go to the ground to secure low passes, particularly when working back to the LOS or horizontally across the field. Very good concentration and tracking ability in order to secure passes over his shoulder deep downfield, as well as the body control to complete the catch inbounds along the sideline when not afforded much space. Good physical toughness, concentration and courage over the middle on Drag/Crossing routes in the short to intermediate, securing passes without focusing on where a hit is coming from. Very good explosiveness and speed to quickly get upfield and stress pursuit angles to gain YAC when catching in stride, as well as the ability to quickly stop and start to elude defenders. Solid mental processing to notice when the QB is moving and break off his route to find open space. Good mental toughness to make plays in critical moments, particularly on 3rd down, and good competitive toughness to produce against all levels of competition. Struggles getting clean releases off Jams vs Press/Man, showing adequate play strength and hand use to fight through contact. Adequate play strength through the route stem, lack of size makes it difficult to use his frame to handle collisions and maintain speed through contact. Adequate ability to use his body to shield DB's from the ball and physically gain separation in tight quarters. Adequate physicality in jump-ball and contested situations downfield, does not high-point or fight back to the ball through the DB. Adequate play strength to break tackles and gain YAC. Adequate physical toughness and aggressiveness as a blocker, primarily looks to engage and mirror defenders without trying to move them by keeping his feet chopping through the block. Role player you can win with who can take the top off defenses and create space for teammates with very good play speed and ability to get vertical. Fits better in a complementary role due to a lack of physicality through the route stem and at the catch point in contested situations, as well as an inability to create space for himself in tight quarters. Not someone you want to count on as a full-time starter at this stage of his career due to recent injuries, age and the aforementioned limitations.
