PROJECTION	Backup Y-TE you can win with, who is a good blocker in a Zone Run Scheme. Has very reliable hands and shows the ability to beat Zone Coverage by sitting between defenders in the short and intermediate passing game. Doesn't possess the AA or foot speed to create separation vs Man Coverage and lacks the strength to be an effective Drive run blocker.

SCHEME FIT	In-Line TE in a Zone-run-heavy offense that utilizes Play Action and Slam Releases. Should be used to attack Zone Coverage in the Seam, short, and intermediate areas of the field. Should not be asked to block a higher quality athlete in pass protection.

SUMMARY

3rd year TE who has started 13 of 36 games , while being heavily utilized in his 1st year under OC Rick Dennison as a Y in a 3-pt stance and a blocker in 2 TE sets. Adequate height with a squared build and short, burly arms. Marginal overall AA, possesses a combination of adequate balance, marginal quickness/COD, and poor explosiveness. Creates separation vs Zone Coverage using his good Mental Processing ability to read the coverage and adjust his route to attack the voids between defenders, particularly using Seam routes vs Cover 3 and Dig or Corner routes vs Cover 2, while also using a subtle push-off at the point of catch. Very good hands and ability to adjust to throws outside of his frame, natural hands-catcher and displays the ability to track the ball over his shoulder or box-out at the POC, while catching passes behind, above, down low, or towards the back-shoulder. Shows good patience and vision with the ball in his hands, uses his down field blocks as leverage to cut off incoming tacklers lowering his shoulder and tumbling forward once he's met in a 1 on 1 situation. Good overall Zone/Space blocker; shows good ability to execute Reach Blocks displaying good punch timing & hand placement at the POA putting his play-side hand outside of the defenders' bicep as leverage to roll his hips and seal off the defender. Good at working with the OT/TE on Combo blocks; displays good timing to execute the block before climbing to the 2nd level using the proper angle to engage and wall-off his defender in space. Plays with good competitive toughness; plays to the whistle and shows great effort by hustling to get an additional block downfield or by showing the grit to sustain a block in Pass Pro vs defenders much bigger and athletic than himself, even if beaten initially. Solid in Pass Protection; plays with solid set quickness to maintain half-man leverage vs rushers and ruins the arc to the QB, while in Pass Pro and reacts well to stunts & counters, while possessing a solid anchor, due to his solid overall play strength and knows when to drop his hips. Slow Release out of a 3-pt stance going into a route and gets rerouted on the stem when faced with Jams at the line by both DBs and LBs. Adequate separation quickness overall; lacks the speed acceleration, and overall AA to separate vs even the slowest of LBs in Man coverage. Adequate after the catch; takes too long to build any speed and doesn't shows the ability to make a defender miss 1 on 1. Adequate Gap blocker; comes up too slow and with a high pad level out of a 3-pt stance not generating enough power at the POA, while also struggling to maintain his block, due to his short arms and subpar lower body strength. Struggles heavily to engage quicker defenders in space and is usually left to try and get in the way of the defender and wall him off for a brief second. Possesses adequate set quickness to intersect very athletic rushers from a 2- or 3-pt stance when facing a speed rush. Overall, a backup Y- TE you can win with, who is a good blocker in a Zone Run Scheme. Has very reliable hands and shows the ability to beat Zone Coverage by sitting between defenders in the short and intermediate passing game. Doesn't possess the AA or foot speed to create separation vs Man Coverage and lacks the strength to be an effective Drive run blocker.
