BEST Mental Processing / Vertical Burst & Speed / Separation Quickness on Intermediate & Deep Routes / Body Control

WORST Play Strength & Physical Toughness in Release & Stem and Blocking / Ability to Make Contested Catches

PROJECTION Starting outside WR you can win with, best used in a scheme which allows him to operate in space where he can leverage his very good play speed, good separation quickness and body control to work the intermediate/deep routes. Marginal play strength and adequate physical toughness make him struggle in his release/stem vs. Press when the DB gets a hand on him. Marginal ability to make contested catches.

SCHEME FIT Any system that uses him as a deep threat and on intermediate routes.

SUMMARY

A 3-year WR who has started 32 of 46 games since entering the league in 2016 as an UDFA, including 9 of 14 in 2018 (missing week 8 & 10 due to an ankle injury). First season in OC Jeremy Bates' scheme (with rookie QB Sam Darnold) which relies on a balanced Run/Pass mix, Play-Action and RPO's and a short/intermediate pass game. Lined up predominantly outside lane, with occasional snaps in minus split and Slot. Was the primary deep target of the team, running mainly fades/posts/comebacks, also working the intermediate curl/dig/out routes. Possesses very good height, adequate weight, arm length and hand size on a very narrow frame. Good AA, with good quickness, balance, COD and explosiveness and solid agility. Good release relying on good quickness and very good burst to get around the DB when releasing outside vs. Press, uses good footwork/quickness in stutter steps and hesitation moves combined with very good burst to win inside vs Press. Very good explosiveness & acceleration to close cushion vs. Off/Bail defenders stressing their leverage with very good play speed, able to take off the top of a defense. Good mental processing, vs Press he quickly recognizes & attacks the leverage of the DB, vs Off/Bail he is patient while in stride angling himself to manipulate the hips of the DB away from his intended route, vs. Zone he adjusts his routes according to the coverage and displays a good ability and timing to find and settle in the soft spots between defenders, solid ability to get open in scramble drills. Good separation quickness leveraging his AA and good body control to make sharp cuts while not revealing his intentions. Shows, when in space, good double moves and convincing head fakes to manipulate the hips of DB and good changes to his pace to keep the DB guessing before the break point. Good footwork and ability to drop his hips and stop on a dime and come back towards the QB on Curls/Comebacks. Crisp two-step/speed cut on deep inside/outside breaking routes. Good hands on non-contested catches, good ability to track the ball while on the run and when stationary, makes catches with extended arms away from his body. Good ability to adjust to balls thrown in front/high/low leveraging his long frame & good body control. Good ability to track & adjust to deep balls. Good body control and awareness getting both feet inbounds when making catches near the sideline. Solid YAC ability, leveraging very good burst and good COD to immediately get north after the catch and showing solid agility to elude defenders. Solid competitiveness, gets extra yards after the catch vs. DB's, runs with good effort on routes where he is a decoy and keeps the DB guessing on run plays by running routes aggressively. Adequate use of hands and marginal play strength vs. Press, struggling to fight through contact and get off the DB's hands if he does not initially win with his feet. Marginal play strength through the route stem, struggles to maintain speed through contact/collision and gets pushed off his stem, unable to hold the red line vs. CB's with good or better quickness and UOH when he does not win with his feet. Marginal ability to make contested catches, displaying marginal hand strength, concentration and physical toughness when in tight coverage or when getting hit immediately at the catch point. Adequate mental toughness, does not rise to the occasion on critical downs/phases in the game, body language shows clear frustration after missed opportunities. Adequate physical toughness and marginal play strength as a blocker, cannot hold his ground when blocking DB's, primarily avoiding engaging and only mirroring the DB. In the NFL, starting outside WR you can win with, best used in a scheme which allows him to operate in space where he can leverage his very good play speed, good separation quickness and body control to work the intermediate/deep routes. Marginal play strength and adequate physical toughness & UOH make him struggle in his release/stem vs. Press when the DB gets a hand on him. Marginal ability to make contested catches.
