BEST	Finishing with Power at the POA, Receiving Ability, Competitive Toughness
------	---

WORST	Long Speed, Explosiveness, Acceleration
-------	---

PROJECTION	Rotational RB you can win with who can set a physical tone with his size and ability to finish runs with strength. Can threaten LB's as a receiver due to his ability to adjust to poorly thrown balls while naturally transitioning upfield as a runner. Lacks the ideal explosiveness and long speed that you want out of a lead back, and will need to be paired with another runner who can provide that added dimension.
------------	---

SCHEME FIT	Can produce in either Gap or Zone schemes, would ideally be used as part of an offense that emphasizes getting the ball to their RB's in the passing game.

SUMMARY

Fourth-year RB who has started 16 of 27 games, including 14 of 14 in 2016, missing Week 9 with a concussion and Week 17 with a rib injury. Played 53% of the snaps on the season, which was most on the team amongst RB's and fourth on the team amongst WR's/RB's/TE's despite the fact that he missed two games. Primarily utilized on Zone and Gap runs, and on screens and flares in the pass game, was often substituted out in clear passing situations and was not often used as a pass protector. Second season playing under HC/play-caller Andy Reid. Has a thick, square frame with very good weight, solid height and hand size, along with solid AA, including solid short area quickness, lateral agility and balance, and adequate explosiveness. Displays good mental processing and vision on Zone runs, patiently sets up blocks by pressing the gap without committing too early, and then shows solid burst through the hole once he picks a lane. Shows solid lateral agility to cut back across gaps when necessary. Solid vision and mental processing on Gap runs, allowing his blocks to set up with proper timing without pressing the direction of the designed hole too early, and shows the ability to improvise, particularly on outside runs by reading the positioning of the opposition and adjusting his path. Hits the hole square and drives forward with solid burst on Gap-based runs. Good ability to finish and gain yards after contact, showing the ability to maintain his balance, play behind his pads and lower his shoulder with good pad level, and then fall forward with good play strength 1 on 1 against LB's and DB's. Very good receiver out of the backfield, shows solid short area quickness to separate at the top of routes that give him 2-way go's across the middle of the field vs. LB's, and very good ability to adjust to balls thrown high or behind him, secure the catch, and then smoothly transition upfield for YAC, especially on screens and short dump-offs in the flat. Solid ability as blocker, displaying solid hand use with good physical toughness and a desire to engage. Good competitive and physical toughness to finish runs, not shying away from contact against all levels of competition, and solid mental toughness, showing the ability to make plays at critical junctures late in games and on 3rd down Adequate explosiveness, elusiveness and play speed, doesn't show the ability to gain many more yards than what is blocked and doesn't outrun the pursuit angles of the opposition. Struggles to accelerate back to top speed once his initial momentum is slowed and lacks the change of direction necessary to elude defenders in the hole to break into the open field once he gets to the 2nd level of the defense. Adequate mental processing in pass protection to sift through the defensive front and identify his responsibility. Rotational RB you can win with who can set a physical tone with his size and ability to finish runs with strength. Can threaten LB's as a receiver due to his ability to adjust to poorly thrown balls while naturally transitioning upfield as a runner. Lacks the ideal explosiveness and long speed that you want out of a lead back, and will need to be paired with another runner who can provide that added dimension.
